Overview

A framework for structuring the weekly, monthly, quarterly, and annual forums where an executive team actually makes strategic decisions — with clear inputs, decisions, and owners for each.

Doesn't this just add more meetings?

It replaces ad hoc meetings with a smaller number of well-structured ones. Most executive teams already spend this much time in strategy discussions — this playbook just gives that time a clear purpose per forum.

What size company is this built for?

Any company with a distinct executive team and more than one business unit or function competing for strategic attention. Smaller teams can compress the cadence but keep the same forum types.
