Overview

A framework for periodically reviewing an already-established international footprint against strategic fit and financial performance, deciding where to invest further, hold, restructure, or exit.

How is this different from the Internationalization & Cross-Border

Expansion Playbook? That playbook sequences entry into new markets you haven't entered yet. This one manages the countries you're already operating in as an active portfolio — deciding where to double down, hold steady, restructure, or exit — which is a distinct, ongoing discipline most companies never formalize.

How often should a geographic footprint review happen?

Annually alongside broader portfolio review is typical, though a company with a large or complex footprint may benefit from a rolling review of a subset of markets each quarter.
