Overview

A framework for building a climate transition strategy and the reporting discipline mandatory frameworks require — treating transition planning as genuine strategic work, not a compliance exercise run separately from the business strategy it should inform.

How is this different from the Sustainability-Linked Growth & Green

Revenue Strategy Playbook? That playbook is about growing revenue from genuinely sustainable products. This one is about climate transition risk management and mandatory reporting compliance — a related but distinct discipline focused on managing exposure and meeting disclosure requirements, not primarily growth.

Do mandatory climate reporting requirements apply to us?

Increasingly broad requirements apply across many jurisdictions and company sizes — confirm your specific obligations with legal/compliance counsel, but treat this playbook's planning discipline as valuable even if current mandatory requirements don't yet apply to your company directly.
