Overview

A framework for the specific verbal communication techniques that make trusted advisor input land effectively with executives — economy of language, precision over hedging, and visible active listening signals — as the communication-technique complement to presence and demeanor.

How is this different from the Trusted Advisor Executive Presence

Playbook? That playbook covers presence qualities like comfortable silence and non-defensive listening that invite candor. This one is specifically about verbal communication technique — how you phrase and structure what you say — a related but distinct skill set.

What's the most common verbal habit that undermines advisor credibility? Excessive hedging — qualifying every statement so heavily that the actual recommendation becomes unclear, which this playbook addresses directly through the economy-of-language principle below.
