

Category

Commercial Excellence

Marketing-Sales Alignment & Joint Planning Playbook

Getting marketing and sales to agree on what a qualified lead actually is, before arguing about lead volume

- Practitioner
 - Intermediate
 - Template Included
-
- Administrator
 - 05 February 2023
 - 3 minute(s)

Overview

A framework for marketing-sales alignment and joint planning — establishing shared lead qualification definitions, joint pipeline planning, and mutual accountability — addressing the persistent friction between marketing and sales that most commonly traces back to disagreement about basic definitions rather than genuine strategic misalignment.

Why does marketing-sales friction persist even in organizations that hold regular joint meetings? Regular meetings without resolving fundamental definitional disagreements — what actually constitutes a qualified lead, for instance — often just provide a recurring venue for the same underlying disagreement to resurface, without addressing its root cause.

What's the single most valuable step for resolving marketing-sales friction? Establishing a genuinely shared, specific lead qualification definition that both teams agree on and use consistently — this single step resolves a disproportionate share of common marketing-sales friction, which frequently traces back to each team using a different implicit definition.

```
{ "@context": "https://schema.org", "@type": "FAQPage", "mainEntity": [ { "@type": "Question", "name": "Why does marketing-sales friction persist even in organizations", "acceptedAnswer": { "@type": "Answer", "text": "that hold regular joint meetings?\nRegular meetings without resolving fundamental definitional\ndisagreements — what actually constitutes a qualified lead, for\ninstance — often just provide a recurring venue for the same underlying disagreement to resurface, without addressing its root cause." } }, {
```

"@type": "Question", "name": "What's the single most valuable step for resolving marketing-sales", "acceptedAnswer": { "@type": "Answer", "text": "friction?\nEstablishing a genuinely shared, specific lead qualification\ndefinition that both teams agree on and use consistently — this single step resolves a disproportionate share of common marketing-sales\nfriction, which frequently traces back to each team using a different\nimplicit definition." } }] }

Subscriber access

Unlock this playbook

This playbook — including every framework, template, and step-by-step section — is available free to Think Insights subscribers. Enter your email to unlock it instantly and get our weekly insights newsletter. No account needed, and access is remembered on this device.

First Name

Last Name

Email

Country

I agree to data processing in accordance with GDPR

Leave this field blank

References

Related playbooks

Commercial Excellence

AI-Enabled Commercial Analytics & Next-Best-Action Playbook

A framework for AI-enabled commercial analytics and next-best-action recommendations — building recommendations grounded in genuine predictive validity and deli

- Practitioner
- Intermediate
- Template Included

Read playbook

Commercial Excellence

C-Suite Commercial Excellence Steering Committee & Governance Playbook

A framework for establishing a C-suite commercial excellence steering committee and governance structure — clear decision rights, substantive review cadence, an

- Executive
- Intermediate
- Template Included

Read playbook

Commercial Excellence

Commercial Excellence in Mid-Market & SMB Segments Playbook

A framework for commercial excellence in mid-market and SMB segments — sales motion, pricing, and process design calibrated to these segments' genuinely differe

- Practitioner
- Intermediate
- Template Included

Read playbook

Talk to us about marketing-sales alignment

Tags

- Marketing-Sales Alignment
- Joint Planning
- Commercial Excellence

Author

Administrator

Think Insights Administrator