Overview

A framework for defining commercial excellence vision and building a maturity-based roadmap — honest assessment of current commercial maturity across key dimensions, and sequencing improvement initiatives realistically rather than attempting advanced capabilities before foundational maturity is established.

Why does commercial excellence maturity assessment matter if leadership already has clear ambition for where they want to be? Ambitious vision without honest maturity assessment risks a roadmap that attempts advanced capabilities before foundational maturity — process discipline, data quality, basic metric tracking — is established, often producing stalled initiatives that could have succeeded with more realistic sequencing.

What foundational commercial maturity dimensions most commonly get skipped in favor of more visible, advanced initiatives? Basic process discipline and data quality — CRM hygiene, consistent pipeline definitions — which lack the visibility of advanced initiatives like AI-driven analytics but are genuinely prerequisite to those initiatives succeeding.
